It's Torero Week! The Sigma Pi Halloween party is usually followed by the appearance of the Death Machine at halftime, as it did last year. Will the Sigma Pi's ever learn or will there be another Death Machine this Saturday?

USD Celebrates Mardi Gras New Orleans Style

by Crissie Bavasi

USD students may finally be setting a spring tradition which has been talked about for years. Students will celebrate Mardi Gras '89 this spring and, if things go as planned, it will not be the last.

Several sophomores and Desales Resident Director Father Owen Mullen are currently working to incorporate the theme of Mardi Gras with the second annual bike race.

Last spring, Mullen contacted Derrick Johnson, director of the upcoming Mardi Gras, and Sophomore Senators T.P. McCabe and Renee' Bukovchik, asking them to pursue the idea of having a weekend of festivities.

Their goal is to gather the students together to get to know each other and have fun, while promoting class unity. After talking to many of the alumni, they found that students today were not as close as they had been in past years.

The weekend is planned for Thursday, February 2 through Sunday, February 5. Scheduled activities include the bike race, which in itself takes two days, and a masquerade ball to be held on the Saturday night.

Because Mardi Gras is very early this spring, much of the planning is taking place now.

Johnson said they do not want to replicate the exact Mardi Gras held in New Orleans, but to change it enough so that the theme "Mardi Gras at USD" is the focus.

Johnson hopes the masquerade ball will be like nothing else ever occurring at USD. A lot of decorating will be done in order to make the forum and the cafeteria dining area look as if it were a real ballroom. Through most of the night a live band will be playing for dancing.

A Mardi Gras king and queen will have been chosen and will be presented during the ceremonies and costumes will be provided for them.

Male students will be expected to wear suits or tuxedos, plus a flair of something extra - and extravagant tie, cane...etc. Female students will wear cocktail dresses also adding something extra - perhaps sequins or beads. Both will be wearing masks to cover the eyes and nose, or the entire face.

Though the activities are not until spring, nominations for the king and queen will be taken before the holidays.

Already, the committee has held a contest for a Mardi Gras design. The design created by senior Jackie Monthofer was chosen because the committee felt it best exemplified what the theme would be this year. The design will be emblazoned on party cups. The cups will be in three separate colors, all tying into the original colors of Mardi Gras: gold, purple, and green. Still, the school wanted to add something of its own, so instead of having a gold cup, the design will be emblazoned in gold. The color blue, standing for USD, will be substituted for the third color.

The committee plans to start small and let the Mardi Gras grow progressively. It is hoped that Mardi Gras 90 will include a parade.

Pi's Halloween Bash Gets Busted (Again!)

by Kent Sligh

It's an old story. Busted Halloween parties are becoming a tradition that is all too familiar to the Sigma Pi fraternity. Last Friday night vice squad officers brought their Halloween VI party at the El Cortez to an abrupt halt.

Nobody was seriously injured, no arrests were made and, as of Tuesday, no charges had been filed.

The story began when the first bus loaded with party-goers left campus just before eight o'clock. Tickets were available for anyone able to make a $15 donation, and many of these donors were not happy when the party ended well before 11pm.

"I was disappointed that $15 was blown on a party that ended so shortly," said a freshman student who attended. "The party was not worth $15 - it sounded like it was going to be worth $15, but in reality it wasn't."

This isn't the first time that Sigma Pi has been accused of not delivering the party that was promised. Most notably, three years ago Sigma Pi threw a disastrous Halloween bash which was plagued with charges of alcohol abuse, personal injury, sexual misconduct and minor vandalism both at the party and later on USD's campus.

Most of Friday's difficulty involved the Sigma Pi representatives and the San Diego Police Department disagreeing on how the party should be run.

The SDPD vice squad did not feel that Sigma Pi's procedure for serving beer was acceptable under the law. In an attempt to comply with vice's requests, all the beer was served from a single room. This factor contributed to crowded conditions and much pushing and shoving.

"It was a difficult situation. It never worked from the start because vice was there and they interpreted the beer situation differently [than they had in the past] and they were just on us from the beginning," said Dave Reiling, President of Sigma Pi. "At 10:30 vice made us take all the beer out of the party."

Many party-goers were most displeased with the rushing crowds of people trying to get beer that resulted when the kegs were isolated.

"Everyone couldn't care less if someone had a costume on, you were just smashed into everyone else," a sophomore said later. "It wasn't very organized. They couldn't have people where the beer was, and that's where everyone wanted to be."

Despite the party's abrupt ending and the student's discontent, Sigma Pi has no plans

AS Speakers Bureau Director Appointed

by Celine Vachon

Bill Berger officially stepped into his position as the new AS Speakers Bureau Director October 20, filling the office that became vacant upon the resignation of Susan Buckel in late September.

As undergraduate Speakers Bureau Director, Berger will focus his efforts on scheduling one big name speaker and several small speakers on campus per semester. He also will join the Speakers Bureau Committee which will be made up of speakers bureau directors from USD's Schools of Law, Business and Nursing as well as faculty members.

The Speakers Bureau will hold their first event November 15. Father Matthew Fox will speak at an event co-sponsored by the Social Issues Committee.

Upon Buckel's resignation, an immediate replacement was sought. The responsibility for the search primarily was given to an advisory committee consisting of Tom Gorman, AS vice president and Val Pearson, director of student activities and speakers bureau advisor. Sam Attisha, AS president, then initiated the final appointment.

Applications for the position went out September 25 and were accepted until October 3. The committee members then conducted interviews and, after careful consideration, decided on their recommendation.

The advisory committee selected Berger as the replacement. On the basis of their recommendation and personal interviews, Attisha appointed Berger to fill the position. The final appointment was approved by the Senate on October 20.

Gorman sees Berger as "satisfying the overall picture of the individual we were looking for to fill the position. He had a sense of what students were looking for as well as organization skills; an essential quality for the job."

Attisha further relates, "His drive, enthusiasm and ambition distinguished him for the position. He knew what he wanted to accomplish."

Berger is currently a junior, majoring in Biochemistry. Although he has not held any previous positions in AS, he is an integral part of Sigma Pi, acting as executive secretary.

Who Are Those "Non-Traditional" Students

by Lucy Kanjer

The traditional college student goes to college directly after graduating from high school. But if you just take a look around you, you will see some very "non-traditional" students here at USD. "Non-traditional" students are typically defined as those college students who come back to school after working for some time in some other capacity.

According to Bonnie Adams, a USD Academic Counselor, males tend to return to school as a result of a mid-life career change. Females, on the other hand, are typically forced to go back to school because of divorce and the need to be self-supporting. Adams also said that non-traditional students typically have GPA's higher than traditional students because they tend to be more conscientious.

Not all non-traditional students fit the above description. Take, for example, Mark Nicola, a RA in the Valley and although he is 27 and a "non-traditional" student, you would never know it. Mark was in the Navy as a diver for five years before returning to school.

After graduating from high school, Nicola went to college in Texas, his home state. But, after three semesters he really had no long-term school goals other than having fun, so he dropped out mid-way through the 3rd semester. Mark signed up with the Navy because he wanted to do something and see the world, but after two years, he knew he wanted to return to school.

Nicola transferred to USD from Mesa

College in the spring of 1988 and is now a political science major. He considers himself a "serious student" but he doesn't "believe in not having fun". Nicola decided to come to USD because it was a school he felt he could get involved in. "I think transfer students appreciate this place more," stated Nicola. Mark doesn't see any disadvantages in being a non-traditional, older student. If anything, he feels an advantage over younger students because he has all the "partying out of his system" and now he "knows what needs to be done and can do it and still have a good time". In addition, Mark feels that in his experiences while out of school he's learned how to talk to all sorts of people; this has helped him in being more open with his instructors and peers.

The only disadvantage Nicola seems to have is that after being out and about in the world, the rules at USD are a little limiting. Sometimes he has trouble keeping in mind that most of the students are younger. Otherwise, he feels well accepted [by other students] and comfortable. Nicola has the attitude that if you are comfortable with yourself, and accept your own situation - then you can just fit right in anywhere.

Jeri LaMay is another non-traditional student who's far from typical. At age 34, LaMay has worked in management in a variety of places ranging from the medical field to employment with the states of California and Oregon. LaMay says she is always been career-oriented and considers herself to be a doer who can start at the bottom and wind up on top.

LaMay returned to school because she found in her experiences that as a female with no degree in a male dominated business that males in general won out financially. LaMay had gone back to school because she got bored when she was off work due to a back injury. She took 23 units a semester in a variety of subjects at Mesa College before transferring to USD as a Biology major. LaMay had always wanted a career in medicine and now she's confident enough to pursue it.

When people tell LaMay she is too old to go to medical school she says "NO!" "I want to help people both health-wise and emotionally so age doesn't matter," stated LaMay with enthusiasm.

LaMay feels she has the right attitude about school because she realizes the disadvantages she faces as an "older student" and works around them. LaMay admits that going to college after being out of the habit of studying for several years is tough at times because the material, especially in the sciences, has changed so much. But she just uses that as an incentive to work harder.

LaMay commented that she does not "even realize the age difference unless someone else does and is startled by it". She added "I love the students I study with" and "why should I allow those 'old age' comments to bother me - it's not a barrier to me."

LaMay feels an advantage over traditional students because she has her vast work experience to help her along. "I know of different older students who use the cop-out that it's harder for them because they're older," said LaMay, "but it's not proper to use age as an excuse to not perform to their fullest."

That statement holds true in any aspect of life. Non-traditional USD students are just that - USD Students. They go through the same pains and worries and stresses that all students go through and they are a lot of fun. So take notice - you can probably learn something.

Pi Party Busted

of offering refunds. "We would like to give refunds...but we lost money on the party. We lost $426, and that is a light figure," said Reiling.

Sigma Pi will also not be claiming the $500 deposit they gave to El Cortez, because a glass door to the beer room was destroyed.

"The glass doors were holding back the crowd, separating the people from the beer. People just kept pushing up against these windows and the security guys were holding them back, and the pressure just broke it in half," said Reiling of the damage.

Still, dissatisfaction persists. One student put it like this: "I was disappointed that I wasted $15 on two hours of elbowing, pushing, shoving, being spilled on, and trying to get a beer."

USD Professor Hosts Catholic Mini-Series

by Jennifer Merriman

USD's Fr. Ron Pachence hosts an eight part television series titled "The Church in Transition - The years after Vatican II (1962-1965)".

The eight programs, each written by Pachence, cover a lively and well-paced discussion of several areas of interest to people today. The video programs, which run about 28 minutes each, explore the ways in which the church has developed over the years since Vatican II.

Pachence is an associate professor of Practical Theology and director of the Institute for Christian Ministries here at USD. Topics discussed include the issue of change and development in a church grounded in tradition, the role of scripture in Catholic faith and practice, changing perceptions of sin and reconciliation and the Kingdom of God as the fundamental teaching of Jesus, and the implications of this teaching for peace and justice concerns.

The series was funded by the Catholic Television Network.

The programs will be aired over CTN in the Bay area and will be available to other Catholic television networks in the United States. They will also be offered for sale to diocesan media centers in the U.S. and marketed to the general public through a publisher in Phoenix.

Each program includes studio presentations, field interviews, studio interviews and voiceover segment, with slides and music.

Television is a New Medium for the Catholic Church

Pachence sees television as a medium which serves a dual purpose for the Catholic Church. It informs adults on issues that concern the Catholic church, and documents how Catholics in the 1980's view their church.

Pachence said "The Catholic church should be doing more of this sort of thing-not in the glitzy style of the televangelists, but more in the tradition of Bishop Sheen, who was on TV when I was growing up in the '50's. Serious, attractively produced, informational programs about the church in contemporary society."

Pachence labeled televangelists as "pure plastic", but quickly added that his program is credible-and he does not ask for money on the series from its television audience.

This Catholic series is also vastly different from the televangelical programs in that Pachence does not "push" the Catholic view, but rather he shows where the Catholics are going in a contemporary society and discussion of the various challenges for the Catholics in the future.

USD as Broadcaster

Pachence feels that USD should get into the broadcasting business.

Pachence said, "USD would also do well to consider building our own microwave TV transmitter (the same type employed by CTN). My producer at CTN is amazed that

USD's Father Ron Pachence

we haven't. We have student and faculty talent. We're on a hill which is an ideal location for broadcasting a microwave signal. And there's no end to the kinds of educational materials we could produce and deliver—not just religious."

"It would be expensive, but in the long run, USD, the church and the public would benefit. If we upgraded our own production facilities in the Media Center, we could even produce programming for local cable broadcast and/or for marketing to the public. The possibilities are endless."

The Future of the Catholic Church

A number of the people Pachence interviews for the programs believe the challenges that Catholics will face in the future require that the church allow for more contribution in policy making. "They want a say in how money is spent in the church and in church policy" said Pachence.

Additionally, Catholics want more emphasis on Scripture, better preaching, better Sunday liturgy, emphasis on social justice and a greater role of participation for Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults (RCIA).

Pachence feels that the Catholic Church must "become more Catholic in the universal sense of the word." By that, Pachence went on to say, "A place for diverse cultures, philosophies, world views and customs. Often," Pachence said "Catholics are perceived as being more Roman than Catholic."

Food Service Fights Back

To the Editor

In 1987, when Dining Services began operating in the University Center, our weekend hours were expanded beyond their present schedule. We did this to provide the kind of service that you talk about in your (October 27, 1988 editorial) "Food Service Doesn't Serve."

After a semester of monitoring our customer counts and revenues in the Grille and Marketplace, it was evident that we were losing money on the weekends. Our choice as a business was to cut back operating hours for those time when customer counts and revenues were the lowest, or to raise prices and meal plan rates to cover the cost of doing business during the slow periods. We felt that we served the majority of our customers best by cutting back hours and providing cost effective operation that allows us to keep prices and meal plan rates reasonable.

We made those cuts confident that on weekends we also offered a nutritious variety of options in the Main Dining Room, options that you fail to address in your editorial.

Might I suggest that in the future rather than simply posing editorial questions, that you would serve your readers better by meeting with me or my staff to discuss your concerns, thereby providing your readers with accurate information and answers. Rudolph Spanos
Director of Dining Services

Dear Mr. Spanos

The purpose of the editorial pages is to pose editorial questions, in hopes of inciting change or at least eliciting a response from the concerned parties. The editorial stated that we believed food service would better serve students by providing more weekend service. We did this because we had heard students ask this question many times.

You replied that this had been tried and was not feasible for simple business economic reasons. That is how the system works. By going to you beforehand, we may unintentionally give the impression that we are serving only as an administration mouthpiece. If I offended you, I'm sorry, but as I said in the first issue this fall, that's my job.

GRADY STANDS ACCUSED

To the Editor

I read (Tom Grady's) review of the movie The Accused, and felt moved to respond to (his) ludicrous remarks.

1. Your honesty is to be greatly appreciated, but your ignorance to life is not to be overlooked. For starters, I find it amusing that you can derive pleasure from an older man hacking to pieces adolescent teens. Yes, I'm referring to the "Freddy flicks" that you mentioned. These types of movies might be great for societies unlearned crowds, but I find it hard to believe that an educated individual can get anything from a movie of such low caliber.

2. I'm sorry to say that you missed an obvious point of the movie when you said, "The producers avow no inspiration from the famous New Bedford, MA case on which it is obviously based. So any factual authenticity is thrown out the window." The producers would rather you think that this could happen in your hometown, at your local bar, not in just a far off state in a little no name town. Mr. Grady I think it is time that you get your head out of the clouds.

3. Finally, I think it is important to note that I'm neither for, nor against, the feminist movement in this country. Obviously, this is not the case for you, since a movie with only one "scene with any muscle" is not enough for you. You are right in one respect, I guess, because if you go into the theater hoping to see a version of RAMBO, then this movie will leave a lot to be desired.

Reagans Disaster(ous) Policy

The recent decision by the Reagan Administration to refrain from assisting charitable organizations in aiding the hurricane-devastated parts of Nicaragua is unfortunate and misguided for a number of reasons.

The U.S. has a long tradition of aiding countries which need disaster relief, regardless of ideology. Even in cases where no direct aid was provided, the U.S. supplied transportation for U.S. based disaster relief organizations such as the American Red Cross.

Refusing to aid Nicaragua because of the politics of the Sandinistas jeopardizes America's precarious foothold in that country. It is the people, not the government, that disaster relief is aimed at.

Some of the hardest hit areas of the country are areas that support the Contra effort. First those people watched us disembowel the Contra effort. Then we refuse to aid nonpartisan agencies in bringing disaster relief to their country. If Vietnam and Afghanistan taught the superpowers anything, it was that the support of the people is the deciding factor in guerilla warfare. Yet we have arbitrarily jeopardized that support for some foggy notion of principle.

The U.S. will also lose respect on the international front, as many other nations will view the administration's attitude as high-handed and cruel. The Sandinistas will probably have a propaganda field day.

Last, but definitely not least, the postwar (WWII) Americans were taught to believe that the U.S. is the good guy, the white knight who rides to the rescue, a nation committed to improving the entire world.

The current administration sounds more like a spoiled child that takes his ball home when he doesn't like the rules.

The Reagan Administration, standing on principle, has made America look callous to the rest of the world, and confused our sense of identity once again.

Midterm Madness

Well, "midterm week" is over. Let's see...the students still had tests, the university still had midterm break, the students were still mailed midterm reports, and the professors still were required to establish whether each student was passing the class.

So tell us, what was all that hassle last semester over midterm grades?

Who benefited from the decision to get rid of them?

The registrar's office went through the same motions and costs.

Students recieved midterm reports regardless of whether they had a failing grade or not. Many students who were not failing anything recieved blank reports.

Because most students were mailed reports there certainly weren't any savings of mailing costs.

Many professors actually thought they still had to turn in midterm grades. Obviously they weren't the ones fighting to change the policy.

It certainly wasn't the students either, they're far to apathetic to have fought for the policy change.

The way it looks from here, a vocal minority of professors pushed through a change that most professors didn't care about. There was no real cost or labor savings. The ones who did lose were the students, who recieved blank reports instead of a useful listing of their standing at midterm.

It's time to restore the old midterm grade policy, or get rid of it altogether.

(NO) DECISION '88

GUEST EDITORIAL
by TONY COMPAGLIA

Over a year and a half and more than a dozen candidates ago, this insane presidential campaign began in Iowa. After eight years of Ronald McReagan, the American public is faced with one of the most pivotal elections in it's history.

Strangely, the presidential hopefuls (hopeless?) seem to raise more disturbing thoughts and possibilities than the issues themselves.

A quick re-cap of the candidates leads one to ask, should not our national bird have been the turkey as Ben Franklin originally suggested.

Take for instance the religion factor, Jesse Jackson and Pat Robertson. The mind boggles that two men, who believe so strongly in one bible, can bet at such opposite ends of the political spectrum.

Robertson, who allegedly ran because God told him to, went off trekking through the Midwest with his tough love sermon. The thought of this guy trying to handle a three trillion dollar debt brings forth a smile until you remember that Robertson beat Bush in the Iowa primaries.

As for Jesse, he was passed over for his parties nomination because of their concern with producing a moderate electable candidate. This allowed military impresario Albert Gore into the race (accompanied by his P.M.R.C. wife).

Jackson's continuous refusal to answer questions about his relationship with segregationist Louis Farakhan made him something less than an innocent victim, however.

Then there were the political stars. Gary Hart, Jack Kemp and Al Gore. These three all give the impression of being created in some PR office or MTV marketing meeting.

Kemp, unlike Reagan before him, never had enough people around to shield from revealing questions. The public soon found out that the one-time Charger quarterback was nothing more than a mouthpiece for right wingers.

Al Gore's and Gary Hart's problems could be summed up in one word—women. T(ri)pper Gore, with her hairspray bottle and censor-happy frame of mind, contributed to her husbands New York Waterloo via Ed Koch. Hart, on the other hand, proved that FDR, Eisenhower and JFK never could be elected today. In spite of the blindingly obvious hypocrisy, Americans still expect marital fidelity from their leaders.

The traditional party candidates didn't fare any better themselves. Robert Dole, an early frontrunner, responded to George Bush's resurgence in the race by engaging in a verbal wrestling match that sent Bush soaring to the top, and Dole tumbling down.

Oh, and Mr. Elitist Corporation Pierre Dupont fizzled out without anyone making a sound except the millions of high school students who sighed in relief that there would be no mandatory drug testing in their schools.

Paul Simon, "the old time liberal", sent the fashion world on it's ear with his bow tie and horn rimmed glasses. He soon realized, however, that the country has gotten used to credit card mentality of the Reagan Era and refuses pay today what it can put off until tomorrow.

Finally the cast of characters has wound down to two league champions ready for battle in a would-be World Series. In reality watching this race has been more like watching the bottom of the division's standings

America is up the creek, financially, socially and politically and wondering who'll get the best draft choice next season. Whether Bush or Dukakis wins, the victorious party will be doomed never to return to the White House for at least three terms.

The reason for this is that America is up the creek financially, socially and politically.

The Republicans, if they win, can look forward to a constant battle with a Democratic Congress and all of Reagan's skeletons. The Reagan administration has placed itself right along with those of Nixon and Harding as being the most corrupt in U.S. history.

Sadly, Bush is a believer in the "delegation of authority to the point of no control" just as Reagan was.

Dukakis simply doesn't have the weight to move Congress. His strong belief in a Massachusetts dominated campaign staff that has shunned many long time party officials resembles that of Jimmy Carter. He made the same mistake and the nation suffered from a government that couldn't get anything done.

That's the race in a nutshell. The only clear thing is that it's going to get a lot worse before it gets better. If you want to know how worse, well hold on tight and pray. Pray that Bush doesn't win and then buy the farm, and the weenie from Indiana becomes, gulp, the leader of the free world.

OPINIONTHE TROUBLE WITH

by Daniel A. Rivetti, D.B.A.

Assistant Professor Finance and Real Estate, School of Business Administration

For your own housing future, please vote no on propositions C, B, D, J, and H. The Citizens for Limited Growth sponsored initiatives D and J are too extreme at both the county and city levels. Proposition D, the Rural Preservation and Traffic Control initiatives sets an initial housing cap of 2,800 units for the unincorporated areas of the county, falling to 1,500 for the next 20 years. Remember, each apartment space and trailer park space is a housing unit. Proposition J, the quality of life initiative (QLI) sets an average cap of 4000 units per year for the next 22 years. These supply limitations are propositions; H, B, and C. These are more acceptable, yet contain prohibitions on certain land uses. The use of floodplains, hill-sides, and wetlands is restricted. All of San Diego's beaches are considered floodplains, and most of the valleys are sloped.

Where is nice flat land available to build? I cannot support the above restriction of supply. Prices of flat land will escalate while investors in slightly sloped land will suffer great losses.

Land is a bundle of rights, not just dirt. The investors in raw land will loose and the owners of existing property will only win if they cash out and move to a less expensive state.

It is naive for San Diego to limit growth in our county while Tijuana grows by 40,000

Land is a bundle of rights, not just dirt. The investors in raw land will lose, and the owners of existing property will only win if they cash out and move to a less expensive state.

inadequate to service the housing needs of SDSU and USD graduating senior classes alone! The net migration into San Diego is not the only source of growth. As far as I know, most of the USD, SDSU, and UCSD students remain in the area, seek employment and build families.

Where will you live? At home? Perhaps triple up in South Mission for 9 months, then head out to Riverside or Imperial Counties for the summer!

The City council and the County Board of Superiors have their own less restrictive families per year. It is racist to deny housing to the economically disadvantaged. It's cruel to impose hardships on construction workers, land owners, and beginning families. And above all, it is economically obscene to deny San Diego youth the opportunity to own a decent home while certain others become enormously wealthy. Any one with common sense knows that the stock of housing is currently inadequate. To limit growth, is to limit your housing future.

In conclusion, I would like to state that I felt the movie was very good and somewhat true to life. It is evident that the movie was made to force the audience to ask themselves "What would I do at that instance?" Needless to say, I found myself asking that very question.

Get It Right Next Time

To the Editor,

I am taking issue with an article printed in the Vista recently, regarding the negatives of Michael Dukakis save one paragraph about George Bush.

The authors, Danny King and Jonathan Crowell, begin by stating that anyone who questions George Bush's leadership abilities is an "obviously underinformed and biased liberal trying to cloud the issues." As I continued to read the letter, I began to see how ironic that line truly was.

A bill that Dukakis tried to pass as congressman (he was never a congressman) that would exempt the men of his state from the draft was called a Nazi plan by King and Crowell. Some more details on this claim would be nice, but I realize there are space limitations in the letter. Still, what in the world does Nazism have to do with it? Nothing, of course.

Then they claimed that Dukakis refused to send the Massachusetts state militia to Nicaragua showed that he was weak on drugs. To set the record straight, he opposed sending 13 public relations specialists in the Massachusetts National Guard to Honduras and Panama. Dukakis saw the whole road building plan as an attempt to intimidate Nicaragua. If you want to discuss Dukakis' stance on Central America, fine. But don't "cloud the issues" with "under-informed" accusations.

The vice presidency was also brought up by King and Crowell. Their only phrase of substance on the subject concerned Dukakis' and Lloyd Bentsen's differences on some key issues. The authors then proceeded to cloud this valid claim with references to Dukakis' eyebrows and Bentsen's mien calling the VP candidate Lloyd "Funeral Home" Bentsen.

My response to their backing of Dan Quayle is that 1) no reputable journalist or commentator has questioned Bentsen's ability to handle the presidency, if needed, 2) no one has accused Bentsen of hurting his own ticket, especially members of his own party, and 3) on the subject of Quayle, there is a difference in looking young, being young, and being younger than your years.

One final note: I nearly fell off my seat when I read that the death penalty was a "fairly cut and dry issue, not a lot of gray area there." Sure pal.

Plight of Salvadorans Depicted in Social Play

by Amy Capen

"A Peasant of El Salvador" was a two-man play focusing on the repressive effects the Salvadoran government had on one peasant family. It was performed on Thursday, October 27 in Camino theatre.

This 90-minute play covered the worsening conditions in El Salvador from 1975 to the present. It centered on the denial of basic human rights and the daily terror instilled upon the Salvadoran people by the government.

Through Jesus, the main character, we can only begin to understand the struggle faced by millions of Salvadorans.

In the play, Jesus's wife and her unborn child die of malnutrition, his daughter is raped and murdered by government security members, his son disappeared, and his sparse land is taken away from him.

These and similar situations are daily realities faced by the Salvadoran people. People are being abducted, tortured, disappeared and murdered by government forces.

"Torture is performed to keep people in constant terror and fear so they won't go against the government," says Stephen Stearns, narrator and actor in the play.

Included in "A Peasant of El Salvador" were lines from actual sermons of Archbishop Oscar Romero and a tape recording of his final 1980 homily.

The actors played out Romero's assassination, which happened after directing his final plead towards the government, "I order you in the name of God-stop the repression!"

Romero had witnessed the hunger and desperation that millions of Salvadorans were suffering and had tried to give these people hope, but he was assassinated because he spoke out against the government.

Freedom of speech is not permitted in El Salvador. More than 60% of the people never have a chance to read. Seven out of 10 children are starving.

Yet rather than spending money on education, food and other desperately needed things, the Salvadoran government is spending billions of dollars on helicopters, bombs and rifles. The government is using these weapons to destroy their own people.

Many of these military weapons have been supplied to El Salvador by the United States. Also, according to Salvadoran human rights activist Maria Teresa Tula, the United States has given 4 billion dollars to El Salvador in the past 7 years, all of which has been used to purchase more military supplies.

This aid from the United States is not helping, says Tula. "It is converting itself into the mourning clothes that people [Salvadorans] are wearing.

As human beings we have a right to speak out against this-to demand that it stop."

The producers of "A Peasant of El Salvador," Peter Gould and Stephen Stearns, believe that we all have the power to help people such as those in El Salvador. "By understanding, by not remaining silent, by expressing ourselves each in his or her own way, we combat a government's untruth; we give hope to people like Jesus."

"The Buddy System" Comes to USD

by Laura Evans

"It is better to prevent attacks, than to do nothing at all." Freshman Class Senator, Murphy Canter, is one who is helping to launch "The Buddy System", an idea for which a definite concern has been expressed.

Anne Yoakam, also Freshman Class Senator, had the original idea to bring the program to USD this year. She first presented the idea in her platform while running for senator.

Since her victory, Yoakam has brought her plan before AS and Father Mullen, Advisor of the Intrafraternity Council.

"The Buddy System", as it will be called, is a program which will provide escorting services to any individual who may not feel safe walking alone on campus after dark.

According to Canter, "The reason 'The Buddy System' is being established is not because people are being attacked, but because there is a fear of being attacked, and because it is better to have some kind of prevention than none at all."

Yoakam adds, explaining that there are a greater number of freshmen living in the Valley this year. This will in turn cause an increase in incidences of freshmen walking

"The Buddy System" ... is a program which will provide escorting services to any individual who may not feel safe walking alone on campus ...

far distances on campus; such as the walk from Camino/Founders to the Valley.

Presently, the plan is fairly sketchy. Basically, all four fraternities will be in charge and will rotate working shifts weekly from fraternity to fraternity.

Along with fraternity members, others are encouraged to volunteer to work. Each volunteer "escort" will go through a selection process to make sure that person is qualified to be an "escort". The selection process will be conducted by a committee which has not yet been established.

A type of service similar to "The Buddy System" was offered at USD by Sigma Pi a few years ago; however, was unused, and therefore disbanded.

Recently, students have shown a growing interest to attempt to revive the service. Senators Yoakam and Canter are doing what they can to get the program underway.

The Freshman Class and the Intrafraternity Council will sponsor "The Buddy System", which is scheduled to start sometime later this month.

Yoakam and Canter are optimistic toward the idea and have received undivided support from faculty and students.

Dr. Williams to Present Lecture on Emerson

by John M. Garcia

On Thursday, November 10, the English Graduate Program will present its fall lecture: "Mess, Order and Ardor: Reflections on Emersonian Idealism."

The lecture, which is the first in a two part fall/spring series, will feature Dr. Irene Williams.

Williams, Associate Professor of English, will be discussing an "inquiry into the relationship between genteel values and the nature of masculine virtue in Emerson's work."

Williams is currently at work on a book manuscript focussed on Emerson and Gertrude Stein.

Next Thursday's lecture is a reflection on the graduate program.

USD's English Graduate Program, which currently enrolls thirty-two students, has attracted a diverse group of students. Some students have taken undergraduate degrees at USD, not only in English but from a variety of other studies, including business and diversified liberal arts.

Dorcas Lounsberry, currently a graduate student in English, received her undergraduate degrees elsewhere. After receiving her degree in microbiology from William and Mary twenty-five years ago, she has returned to the academic life looking for a faculty interested in working with re-entry students.

Unlike Lounsberry, who is interested in a structured program with a writing track, John Madrugada finds that a track in literature would be stimulating.

Madruga received his undergraduate degree in English here at USD. He is now pursuing his graduate degree at USD. Later, he would like to pursue his Ph. D. His emphasis is in the study of nineteenth-century American literature.

The graduate program lecture will begin at 4 pm in Manchester Executive Conference Center Auditorium.

USD faculty and students are invited to attend free of charge. There will be a reception following the lecture.

by Sister McHugh

Susan German is the coordinator of the USD Southeast San Diego Tutorial Program. The tutorial program is currently in its third year of operation.

Jennifer Welker, Director for Expansion of the Washington D. C. Schools Project observed USD's tutorial program. Welker works for the Center for Immigration Policy and Refugee Assistance at Georgetown University.

The Georgetown's program has 200 volunteers including undergraduates, staff and alumni. These volunteers assist 340 students on a regular basis.

The volunteers go to homes of immigrant families and tutor. The tutors then become a resource for the entire family.

Volunteers also tutor immigrant students twice a week at different schools.

An Open Letter to USD Students From Sigma Pi Fraternity
David C. Reiling, President

Dear Students:

Last Friday evening, Sigma Pi Fraternity attempted to put on our annual Halloween Party. Many of you know that our efforts proved to be futile.

Production of an event of this magnitude requires months of preparation to ensure that students have a safe and memorable experience. Our officers and committee heads worked tirelessly to find excellent entertainment, the right facility, and to transport our students safely. Fire and police permits were secured. A million dollar insurance policy was purchased for the event. For all intents and purposes, every base was covered. Sigma Pi was complying with university and municipal guidelines and codes.

In spite of all of the above preparation and compliance with the bureaucratic "red tape," I was met by the vice squad of the San Diego Police Department upon my arrival at the party. Those of you who were there know that our hands were tied. The vice squad decided that our procedure for serving alcohol was inadequate. Ironically, this was the same procedure used at the El Cortez for many of our previous parties. In short, the party ended abruptly and "A Good Time was Not had by all." In spite of all of the negative consequences, many students thoroughly enjoyed the bus ride to and from the party as well as the two full sets provided by both bands.

It is significant that students realize the financial burden taken on relative to the financing of this size event. We would gladly issue refunds to students who attended the event. However, we made no profit on the party. The arithmetic is simple:

Total revenues: $12,853.00

Expenses:

Rental of El Cortez Ballroom:	2,000.00
Entertainment	4,500.00
(Don Carlos and Suelele)
Food and Beverages:	1,645.00
Bus Transportation:	3,300.00
Publicity:	250.00
Insurance and Permits:	617.00
Security Guards:	840.00
Truck Rental:	127.30

Total Expenses:	$12,979.00
Event Deficit:	(426.00)

It is clear to me that all campus organizations considering production of major off-campus events should totally rethink their approach. Perhaps the day of the BIG off-campus party has come to an end.

On behalf of my brothers, I express my sincere apologies for any inconveniences brought by this situation. In short, we did the best we could under the circumstances.

Thank you.

From Madonna to Phillip Glass, Designer Jerome Sirlin Speaks

by Tom Grady

Across the country, critics and audiences alike are asking who is Jerome Sirlin and how is he changing the look of 20th century theater? His designs for Madonna's world tour gave a boost to an already busy career. But his holographic projections for 1000 Airplanes on the Roof, which premieres Monday night at 8:00 at Symphony Hall (see related article page 10), are threatening to advance the look of theater to revolutionary heights.

Sirlin, along with writer, David Henry Hwang (M. Butterfly) and composer Phillip Glass collaborated to tell the story about a character confronted with the search for identity after being kidnapped and then released by aliens. Running through New York, the character, "M" wonders if she is hallucinating as she tries return to conventional reality with her memories of the abduction.

Sirlin: "At the beginning, it was just Phillip and I. We wanted to do a theater piece on The War of the Worlds, but it was already in the works somewhere else. So we turned to this idea, relying on all the recent writing there is on alien abductions.

Vista: "Like Whitley Strieber's Communion?"

Sirlin: "Yes, but I didn't want to get too specific about an individual incident. I mean one woman recently told me that the aliens she encountered were blonde and blue-eyed!"

Vista: "A sort of surfer alien?"

Sirlin: "Yes, you could say that."

Utilizing the modern technology of holography Sirlin creates a three dimensional environment for "M" to be seen leaping from skyscraper to skyscraper and then disappearing in mid-air.

"It was unusual. During rehearsal, the actors were used to using props: a table, pen, etc. I would have to say, don't worry; it'll be projected there."

Ours is a Whale's World

Life and other jokes

by Kent Sligh

Those two whales finally swam to freedom Friday, and nobody is happier for them than I am. I hope they're not dead.

There were three whales, but one of them croaked. The good news is that, after a million-dollar rescue, the other two whales are free and may live. How promising.

Dramatic rescues like this are great because they bring our whole nation together. America hasn't come together this way since Baby Jessica fell in the hole and we all watched and waited until they got her out.

Actually we should be happier about the whales, because pound for pound it was a better save.

Of course, to be fair to Baby Jessica, we have to admit that the whales didn't fall into a hole. I think we will all agree that if the whales had fallen into a hole, like Jessica did, we would have never got them out alive.

On the other hand, to be fair to the whales, Baby Jessica wasn't trapped underwater by ice. If she had been trapped in the Arctic Ocean underneath several feet of ice, like the whales, she wouldn't have made it either.

But that's not important. The point is both rescues were heroic examples of people working together for a common cause, and both had happy endings.

Unless the whales swam about ten miles and keeled over, in which case the whole whale rescue was kind of a waste.

How smart are whales anyway? I have to wonder what they were thinking when they first noticed the ice.

FIRST WHALE: Boy! It sure is COLD!

SECOND WHALE: *You're not kidding! And I keep bonking my @#! head every time I try to go up for air!

FIRST WHALE: You too?! This is strange! Hey - how about that whale over there? Hey buddy, are you okay?!

THIRD WHALE: (silence)

SECOND WHALE: I think he's dead.

FIRST WHALE: Oh no! We're in trouble now!

SECOND WHALE: Golly! I hope a rescue operation that combines the efforts of Eskimos, environmentalists, oil company experts, the US military and Soviet icebreakers will come to save us!!!

FIRST WHALE: Me too!!!

Actually the conversation probably went more like this:

FIRST WHALE: Need air.

SECOND WHALE: Want air hole.

THIRD WHALE: (silence)

I don't know about you readers, but I'm sure glad that all those people spent a million dollars freeing those whales, who may die, instead of wasting their effort on a less important crisis like people in the world who are starving to death.

It's beginning to look like the only way a starving person can get any help these days is to become trapped under ice in the Arctic, or maybe fall into a hole in Texas.

Clearly starving people are at a disadvantage because many of them don't have access to Arctic ice or a Texas hole.

This should be a lesson to you readers - you should all sleep well tonight knowing that you live in a world where people care enough about life that they don't just sit back and do nothing while whales die.

Gravity is Tough on Drunks

by Michael Hall

Drinking and driving. Not a good combination, as countless public officials and announcements attest to. But consider the skimpy alternatives presented to the festive crowds of teeming drunks, especially during this Homecoming weekend.

Well, there is drinking and walking. Not a particularly great maneuver for people who lack coordination. This, of course, occurs in many individuals whether they drink or not. But especially for those who do, walking can be a terribly dangerous thing. Walls suddenly loom before them, where they were sure no walls had existed before. Noses get mysteriously bruised. Knees are found scraped the next morning, the forgotten result of an impromptu roll down the stairwell. Thank God there are only ten steps between the flights in Valley Housing.

Drinking and riding a bicycle is not much of a hope, either, for intoxicants on the move. The laws of gravity prevent it. These are the only laws a drunk will find impossible to break (even in Tijuana.) Man was never created to sit atop a one inch thick construction three to four feet above ground while being unable to tell right and left from up and down. Besides, even worse than cars, bikes can travel down stairways at great velocity uncontrollably.

Of course, the inebriated individual could stay put. This would prevent any damage from movement. However, keep in mind the sort of macabre person who would also stick around after the party's over. Not particularly interested in conversation, to be sure. Waiting on the sidewalk is not to be advised, either, unless one enjoys every third car stopping and some guy yelling "hey babe!" (Especially embarrassing if one is a male.)

So, it seems that though there are many people shouting out not to drink and drive, what viable alternatives are offered? Catch-22, what do we do?

I suppose we could just not drink. Hold on! What am I saying?!

Top Seven Tips For "Safe Sex"

Off-Beat's Top Seven List

1. First, it takes a lot of practice. Strive for perfection.

2. Find a partner. This is important because there is a danger of cramps or fatigue if attempted alone.

3. When choosing a partner, find someone whose ability is similar to your own. Selecting a partner more advanced than yourself can lead to injuries, and picking beginners can be frustrating.

4. Practice without an audience. Crowds tend to cause nervousness, and often encourage too much competition among participants.

5. Warm-ups are a good idea. Loosening the muscles and warming the body's system will increase efficiency during the practice session. Good warm-ups include fireplaces and brandy.

6. Record your practicing on film or video. Later viewing can show weaknesses to be worked on and strengths to be emphasized. Watching these work-outs will be a great assist to future attempts.

7. Keep a rules book handy. Often practicing safe sex will be mistaken for the real event by the participants. When this occurs, disputes over plays is common, and an authority should be consulted before things get out of hand. It is best to keep the rules book near the playing field, so the stride will not be broken.

Genius/Devil Phillip Glass stops in at Symphony Hall.

Looking at Glass: Shattering Illusions

by Tom Grady

(This is the first in a three part series on the science-fiction music theatre piece, 1000 Airplanes On The Roof which will premiere on November 7th at Symphony Hall. This weeks' focus is on composer Phillip Glass.)

What is it about Phillip Glass' music that is for some, the greatest contribution to the 20th century and for others, music to purchase a gun by? It is a difficult question, and yet with the ever increasing acceptance of Glass' musical vocabulary, he is impossible to ignore.

And you'll have the chance to see that when 1000 Airplanes on the Roof stops in San Diego for one night along its' 38 city tour.

Projecting 3-D holograms onto an ever-changing set, 1000 Airplanes on the Roof tells the story of an alien abduction of a Manhattan-ite named "M". M is subjected to painful experiments, returned to Earth and then told to forget all that has happened to him/her, (the part is played by both a man and a woman on alternating nights.)

Without a doubt this music-media piece promises to be the theatre event of the year. Says Time, "It's part Freud, part Kafka, and part Steven Spielberg. Operatic design may never be the same."

Depending on what record store you are in, Glass' music can be located under jazz, rock, classical, or even new age. This gives support to his maverick status. His music relies on repetitions of simple, elegant musical phrases and then layering them in a circular pattern: a wheels within wheels ideas. His music is labeled as minimalistic, though he hates the term, and is popular with both the college rockers and the symphony set.

It's amazing how his popularity stretches across the boundaries of musical tastes. He has played a selection from his "Songs From Liquid Days" on "Saturday Night Live" as well as preiering "Einstein On The Beach" at the Metropolitan Opera. Any musician who can collaborate with both David Byrne and Beverly Sills is worth a listen to.

A limited amount of half price tickets are available at the U.C. box office. This event is sponsored by the San Diego Foundation for the Performing Arts. This organization seems to be a progressive oasis in the conservative desert fo San Diego's performing arts offerings.

Sa-Fire's Soul Is Hot

by Salomon Rojas

The music industry is lucky to receive the pleasant tunes of a bright and aspiring artist by the name of Sa-Fire. Her music if filled with a Latin taste that is quite enjoyable. The music is some of the most dancable that I have come across in a long time. Mark Anthony and Andy Panda, two top writers of dance music have gotten together with Sa-Fire to produce this most viberant new sound.

The LP which is entitled SA-FIRE shows the great extent of the musical capabilities of this Puerto Rican born, New York raised lady. It starts out with "Boy, I've been told", a tale which concerns the ending of a relationship. Next comes "Love Is On Her Mind", relating the jealous deeds of a friend trying to steal anothers boyfriend. "Thinking of you" gives an account of the pain one feels when that special someone is far away while "I Wanna Make You Mine" is a hopeful song about getting settled with someone.

"It's A Crime" asks why it is a crime to want somebody when they don't want you and "You Said You Loved Me" follows with a similar theme adding what one does when left for someone else. "Gonna Make It" mentions the wish for success and contrary in a sense is "Better Be The Only One", the most erotic song describing personal things which should not be shared. "Together" is a beautiful composition about a pair which have gotten everythings working and "Love At First Sight" needs no explanation.

It is hard to believe that this artist began making records only a year ago. Her early hits, "Don't Break My Heart" and the earth shattering "Let Me Be The One" established her as one of the most exciting new singers around. Both in critical and commercial camps she is praised highly, and with good reason.

Metal Lords Take Over

by John Roberts

With all of the new bands these days, and with all the "new" styles of music as well, it is getting easier to get musically lost and seemingly harder to find new bands with any amount of measurable talent.

One band, however, does demand one's attention. Rising from the ruins of his band Giuffria, keyboardist extraordinaire Gregg Giuffria returns with his new band, House of Lords. Giuffria is best known for their Journey-ish top 40 hit "Call to the Heart" in 1985.

What House of Lords actually is, is a revamped version of Giuffria. House of Lords includes three alumni of the old band, including guitarist Lanny Cordolla, bassist Chuck Wright, and of course keysman Gregg Giuffria. New faces include vocalist James Christian as well as drummer/percussionist Ken Mary.

Gene Simmons, the well-known bassist/vocalist from Kiss, helped group this band together and has an obvious impact on their musical direction. But the songs on the album are still primarily influenced by Giuffria's songwriting and his synthesizer and keyboard work. These elements help to achieve the band's original sound. Although James Christian's vocals are strong, they sometimes sound typical in that he can be compared quite easily to such singers as Whitesnake's David Coverdale and, not suprisingly, Gene Simmons.

The album as a whole is very strong, but the tunes that stand out from the rest are the one's that employ the keyboards as the most prominent instrument. This leaves Cordolla's guitars as being used as more of a textural instrument, instead of just hammering out power chords. Such songs written in this vein are "Edge of Your Life", "Under Blue Skies" and "Pleasure Palace". Other real catchy tunes are the Y+T sound-a-like "I Wanna be Loved" and the upbeat 1950's musical influence in the song "Lookin' for Strange".

So if you are looking for a band that has a lot to offer and with a diversity of musical influences, House of Lords may be the band you have been searching for.

Maclaine Is A Madame

The Reel World

by Tom Grady

Shirley Maclaine may be the most enjoyable ham in Hollywood. She throws herself into her films, even the stinkers, and comes out smelling like a rose, because she seems to be having such giddy fun. Here she's playing Madame Sousatzka: an eccentric Auntie Mame-ish piano teacher who touches the life of her blossoming student, played by Shabana Azmi.

Putting a spin on her Aurora character from Terms of Endearment Maclaine again displays a character that, at the drop of a dime, cries, screams, swoops, rants and surprises us at every turn. We wait on her every squint, here every sustained pause to see how Shirley's going to treat this line or slam that opposition. As Maclaine plays it, Madame Sousatzka couldn't exist, but we wish she could. And after all, isn't that what movies are all about?

Cleverly, or judging by director John Schlesinger's recent work, luckily, Maclaine is set off by a number of quiet, delicate, English performances. And you would think these gentle characters, and there are number of them, would make the very American Maclaine appear vulgar, but they don't. Maclaine's excesses seem so correct as a shake up for the complacent English. Without her, Madame Sousatzka would end up as one of those light forgettable British imports.

Although Sousatzka is a bit too fond of itself and at times, needs a little push, it was such a pleasure to sink into a film that could juggle so many well-defined characters. All the acting here is good. Down to the briefest appearance, you'll see subtle shadings absent from most of the crap oozing out of Hollywood.

Weekly Attack #1:

Rip On Rap For This Attack

by Peter Meyer

I've decided to start my weekly attack column. I will pick one style of music each week and just tear it to shreds. This week my poor unfortunate style is rap.

What is rap? Is it a) when your mom cracks you upside your head, b) an really annoying style of music composed of overpowering bass and ludicrous lyrics, or c) a charge, like dude that's a really bum rap.

If you picked a) you are probably from Nebraska, if you picked b) you are probably someone with fairly decent taste, and if you picked c) you probably live in Mission Beach and listen to it.

Rap has bands like L.L. Cool J. or Run DMC. Why do they use so many initials? Can't they spell? In order to rap you need no real musical talent whatsoever. All you need is to steal some classic guitar licks and record them. Then turn up the bass and shout about gold chains, mini-trucks, girlies, and crack.

Not only does the music make my head hurt, the people that listen to it really scare me. Did anyone see Colors? Some people say that heavy metal can be fatal. Since the recent release of Run DMC's new movie Tougher Than Leather at least three people have been shot outside theatres showing the picture. Now theatres are dropping or cancelling the movie faster than a hot knife through butter.

My favorite rap group has to be Eric B. and Rakim. There they go again with the initials. These guys' album cover shows them wearing enough gold to make the guards at Fort Knox shake. Actually I could never have a favorite group because all rap is the same. This music is definitely doomed, it has nowhere to go except far, far away. Now understand all you rap fans, I'm not calling you stupid for listening to this asinine trash after all it is a free country. I am just pointing out that rappers and rap are hypocrites. You see their commercials against drugs then you listen to their songs that glorify drugs and gangs. On top of that you read the papers and watch the news. That just backs up raps' negative image and will hopefully doom it East L.A.

Toreros Start Slow, Finish Big

by Angelo Lombardo

It took a whole quarter to get the USD scoring machine in gear on Saturday but, once it did it went immediate into over drive. The Toreros rebounded from a scoreless first quarter and turned in their best offensive performance of the season in rout to 31-21 victory over the LA Verne Leopards.

USD without a doubt had it's best offensive game of th season piling up 362 yards yards on the afternoon. Every one on the Torero offense had a big day. Quarterback Doug Piper went 8 for 11 and claimed 124 yards of offense along with 2 touch downs from the La Verne secondary.

Junior Running back Todd Jackson rushed for 100 yards for the second week in a row and scored one USD's 4 touch downs. An offensive line anchored by Mike Cassady and Leroy Hughes provided gaping holes that allowed USD to ramble for 200 yards on the ground. Dave Nottoli lead the receiving corps with a big 69 yard reception.

The Torero defense seeing the offense having a big day did not want to left out. Dave Dunn won the re-election for president of the sack club by sacking LA Verne quarterback Mark Brown three times to make him the defensive sack leader with 10. Mark Crisci got his forth interception of the season to make the defensive leader in that category. Senior line backer Sean Rezaian after having his best game against Occidental followed with another great game. Rezaian and senior lineman John Gomez put up a defensive wall that held LA Verne to a meager 60 yards rushing. USD's defensive performance was marred by a sad note though. Senior linebacker Braulio Castillo was not able to play because he he was scheduled for surgery on Monday morning.

USD got it's first score at the with five minutes gone in the first quarter. Piper threw a 69 yard stike to Dave Nottoli and offensive machine was rolling. Later in the quarter senior Dave Gilmore came up with a lineman's dream by picking off a pass and returning it to the Leopard five yard line. Piper came out and took immediate advantage of the situation and tossed a three yard pass to Ty Barksdale to give USD its second touch down. The touch down plus a 24 yard field goal by Jim Morrison gave the Torero's a 17-0 half time lead.

In the third quarter Todd Jackson highlighted his day by running 23 yards for the Toreros third touch down and a 24-7 lead. USD's last score came when sophomore Todd Whitely made big of his opportunity to play by rushing 16 yards for his first touchdown of the season.

USD plays its next game during Homecoming week on November 5, Saturday against UC Santa Barbara.

Toreras Defeat Hofstra in Three Games

by Meg Estey

The University of San Diego women's volleyball defeated Hofstra University in non-conference match last Saturday night. The victory was the only match of the week as USD upped their record to 8-12.

In the 15-8, 15-11, 15-9 victory, sophomore middle blocker Angie Rais powered the Toreras to the victory. Rais pounded down 14 kills and registered a .600 hitting percentage. Junior Cindy Silldorf had 4 service aces to lead the Toreras.

USD returns to WCAC action tonight at the Sports Center against Gonzaga University from Spokane, WA. Saturday, Portland arrives to challenge the Toreras. Both matches begin at 7:30pm.

Currently, USD is ranked fifth in the nation in blocks as ranked by the American Volleyball Coaches Association (through October 26). USD has 3.903 blocks per game average.

Rugby Loses Tough Match to Escondido

by Jonathan Canedo

USD Rugby lost a hard fought match to Escondido last Sunday as the Toreros lost their first game of the pre-season. Their record now stands at 1-1-1 as they head into the Tucson Tournament this weekend. At Tucson, the Toreros will play four games in two days before returning to San Diego on Sunday.

In last Sunday's game, the Toreros fell 28-6 to a talented Escondido team. Both teams played well, but Escondido was able to take advantage of their scoring opportunities as they scored five tries and four conversions. USD's sole score came on a try by Mark Burr as Dan Davis added a two point conversion to prevent a shutout.

USD's second team also lost to Escondido, this time by a score of 12-4. John Penrith scored the try for the Toreros as the second team played an excellent game. However, Escondido, who were the Southern Cal's White Division's Men's Rugby Champions last year, were able to outscore the Toreros.

After the team returns from the Tucson Tournament, their next game will played at Long Beach on November 13th. The team will also play in the All-Catholic Tournament before they start the regular season on December 3rd.

As the Toreros continue to play well and improve, they should have an excellent season. So come on out and watch the roughest game on campus and cheer on the USD Rugby Club to victory.

Exercise and the Couch Potato

Sportstalk

by Chris Orr

Are you tired of lying around all day and doing nothing? Are you tired of being called a couch potato? Tired of waking up each morning with a hideous beer belly? Are you just plain tired?

Well wake up you couch potato, its time to realize that twelve ounce curls just don't cut it any more. Exercise is a vital part of life. If you don't exercise your life can be shorter than you would like it to be.

However, you shouldn't just go out and run twenty miles and tell yourself that you exercised. Why? Because a proper warm up is essential and starting at your own pace is also important, but more importantly your muscles will hate you for the rest of your life.

When getting started it is a good idea to see your doctor first. He will tell you at what pace that you can safely start out and let you know your general condition before you begin.

After your doctor has told you that you must exercise or die, you will have to be properly attired. This does not mean that you go out and buy hundreds of dollars in shoes and fancy spandex outfits that leave no doubt as to gender. You might look nice, but if you decide not to follow through the money will have been wasted.

No matter what you do though, if your running or biking or swimming or whatever, you must warm up your muscles. Some simple stretch exercises for the legs, arms and torso to prevent injury or pulled muscles.

So now you ready to go. You're dressed, properly warmed up but you don't know what to do. Whether your swimming, running, or biking or any other sport start slow and at your pace. Many a time you will find yourself showing off to some gorgeous guy or gal wearing those fancy spandex suits and you will hurt yourself.

Now some of you are saying that running is pretty stupid and boring, what other sports can we participate in? If you live on campus there are a lot of things you can do. There are intramural sports, sports clubs and collegiate sports. There are also things to do down at Mission Bay Aquatic Center and the YMCA on Friars Road and Napa offer a wide variety of sports and exercises.

If you feel that you don't want to engage in organized sports, the weight room is open to people who want to get started lifting weights, or basketballs may be taken out of the Sports Center for use in the Gym, go on up and check the schedules so that your time doesn't conflict with any Intramural or collegiate event.

Psychologically, however, most people find it difficult to adhere to exercise regimen. Some are discouraged because the results are not immediately seen, some because they did not warm up properly and they injure themselves, but most will quit because they are just plain lazy.

For those of us who do exercise consistently though, we will be the ones who will reap the benefits of feeling good about ourselves and living longer lives.

Duke Plays In Last Home Game

by Jonathan Canedo

The USD Soccer team split two games last week as they defeated Biola and then lost a close game to Santa Clara by a score of 2-1 in the Torero's last home game of the season. With only three games left in the season, USD improved their overall record to 9-7-1 as their WCAC record dropped to 1-3-1.

In the first game played last week, the Toreros tore apart Biola by a score of 4-0 as Vince Bianchi registered USD's first hat trick of the season. Jason Pearson scored the Torero's other goal as sophomore goaltender Marc Duggan had his second shutout of the season.

Bianchi's first goal came off of a crossing pass which he trapped, then headed past the opposing goalie. His second goal occurred as he dribbled straight past two Biola defenders then shot the ball into the net. Pearson scored USD's third goal on a breakaway down the left side of the field. Bianchi then added his third goal of the game to put USD up 4-0.

The whole team played well, but it was Bianchi who provided the spark for the victory. He had a great game as he scored on all three chances that he had.

After the victory over Biola, USD returned for their last home game of the season. In a very close match, the Toreros lost to Santa Clara, who is ranked eleventh in the nation. The first half of the game was scoreless as the Toreros managed to shut down Santa Clara's offense.

But in the second half, Santa Clara came alive as they scored first to take a 1-0 lead. That lead didn't stay for long as Jason Pearson tied up the game with a chip shot into the left corner of the goal on a direct free kick. But, Santa Clara managed to score again to take to win the game by a margin of 2-1.

The Toreros played well and showed a lot of heart as they stayed with Santa Clara throughout the game. USD played a patient game, making good passes and not forcing the ball against an excellent Santa Clara defense. The game could of gone either way as USD missed a couple of chances and Santa Clara capitalized on theirs.

USD now has three games left in the season, all of them on the road. This last home game of the year was also the last home game for the team's lone senior, captain Chris Duke. Duke, who played all four years at USD, has 19 goals and 60 points in his career as a Torero.

Ladies, circle November 12 on your calendar and prepare for a full day of fun and exciting Powder Puff Football. Then cancel any plans you had for November 13 and probably the 14th and 15th as well. Write "recuperate" on your calendar; it is that kind of tournament.

Entries are due Wednesday November 9th at the 5:30 captains' meeting and the fee is $10.00 per team (not per person). Only seven women are necessary to field a team, but the roster limit is 20, and it is a good idea to come close to that limit. Remember, you will play anywhere from 2-5 football games in a single day.

A number of teams have started practicing, but even if you haven't, it is not too late to organize your team. So, join in on the fun and play Powder Puff Football.

Speed Soccer: Upsets Abound

The IM speed soccer playoffs got underway last week and the results of the womens semi-finals were easily predictable. The mens opening round games were anything but.

First up was fifth ranked AIA vs the #3 team, AGSP. Everything started out normal enough as Jim Cameron scored on a breakaway to give AGSP the early lead. However, Sean Moore came back three minutes later with a far post shot that tied the score. In the second half, Cameron quickly scored on a header but Will Healy almost immediately countered for AIA. With nine minutes left the score was still tied, but then Moore scored to give AIA their first lead. Shortly after, Healy and Paul Tobin each found the back of the net to ice AIA's 5-2 victory.

If that result was surprising, the next game was an absolute shocker. Unranked 4th Floor Desales proved they truly are the most improved team in the league as they knocked off #4 ranked Hung Over Butt Luvin' It 4-1. Eric Magnuson and Jeff Whaley did most of the damage for the victors, and Sam Bartholomew's eight saves insured the victory for the all-freshman team.

In the women's league, Still Hangin' is being listed as a 3-goal favorite for tonight's (8:00 pm) championship game. However, if the way Buck Naked played last week is any indication, the defending champs may have their work cut out for them. It is not likely that they will, but just maybe...

Buck Naked's 6-4 victory over USD Maddogs was not really as close as the score indicated. With Ann Caro scoring five times, the #2 ranked team opened up a 6-2 lead with a little more than three minutes left. Marcy Ayers scored two late goals to make the score respectable, but the outcome was never in doubt.

Still Hangin' had an easy time with the USD Untouchables and in deference to the Untouchables, the final score will not be reported here. Let's just say that the bull at a bullfight has a better chance than the Untouchables had last Thursday.

Eliminations In Men's Softball Playoffs Begin

Men's softball playoffs began Sunday and "blowout" seemed to be the name of the game throughout most of the day. The 1:59er's bounced back after a disappointing co-rec loss to trounce No Glove, No Love 15-3. Al Zawistoski, Mike Ralez, Mike Coulson, and Damian Head had two hits each for the 1:59ers, who completely dominated this game from the start. The 1:59er's will face top seeded Doggie Style next week.

Bringin the Wood lived up to expectations in round one of the playoffs by knocking off Sigma Chi (A) 16-8. Sigma Chi opened with two in the first but could not fight off the barrage of hits by Bringin the Wood in the late innings. Brian Day had two singles, a triple and a walk, and Dave Dunn added a single and a homerun to pace the b-league team. Bill Jones led both teams at the plate with a double and three singles and Dan O'Connell had four singles for Sigma Chi.

Phil Isbell's team was over-powered in the next game though, and their season was ended with a 12-2 loss to the animals of Bronx Zoo. Bronx Zoo used Bringin the Wood for batting practice as they accumulated 18 hits. Leading the pack was Pat Casinelli with a triple, a double, and two singles while Joe Duarte added three singles for the victors. Greg Moll had two singles and a triple to insure the victory.

Liquor and Poker made The Unknown glad they were unknown as they trounced them 25-1. (and you thought the playoffs were exciting) The clearly over-matched B-league team could manage just three hits for the entire game. Rich Spinelli had the "triple-double" cranking out three two-baggers. Other outstanding hitters for Liquor and Poker were Dean Pisciotta, Wade Walker, Tom Gorman, and Charlie Goldberg.

Life soon got tougher for Liquor and Poker as their nightcap game faced them off with a strong Sigma Pi team. When it was over, Poker had folded 11-8. Sigma Pi compiled 16 hits including a grand slam homerun by Griffin Gmelich.

It took eight innings but Well Hung hung on to beat Up Your Assets 14-13. It was a "hit" parade as the two teams combined for 27 of them. Chris Vansell was four for four with a triple and three singles for Up Your Assets. Mike Knowles singled and scored the winning run in the eighth for Well Hung. Eric Brown also had an outstanding game at the plate with a triple and two doubles for Well Hung.

That was all for Well Hung as they met up with Public Enemy in the next game but were shot down 7-2. Public Enemy was paced at the plate by Bert Schlesier and Brent Shaffer, who each had home runs, and Tim Kaiser who added numerous singles. Public Enemy's defense was strong throughout as they held Well Hung to their only two runs in the fourth.

Co-Rec Volleyball Champs Crowned over Weekend

The tension was high Saturday in the gym with the Co-Rec Volleyball A and B league championships on the line.

In the first A league semi-final match, #3 ranked Sigma Chi faced #2 Short But Sweet. At first glance this match up looked pretty even, however John Holland and Katey Potts combined their efforts to lead Short But Sweet over Colby Young's Sigma Chi by the lopsided score of 15-8, 15-4.

In the other semi-final game, #1 ranked Dive and Dig was matched up against #4 ranked Eat My Spike. This was definitely a game where the hardest hitting team would prevail. Unfortunately for Eat My Spike, captain Byl Berger and Kelly Lawrence could not get things going as Dive and Dig's Ken Patrick spiked his team to the finals winning 15-3, 15-4.

At the start of the championship match, Dive and Dig took control winning the first game 15-9. However, in the second game, Emelie Tirre's Dive and Dig looked ragged and it appeared as though Jay Wessley and Meg Estey were going to lead their Short But Sweet team to an easy victory. Short But Sweet led by as many as 7 points, but Anne Sperazzo, Ken Patrick and Jim Spina of Dive and Dig really did not want to go a third game, and with Sperazzo setting and Patrick's and Spina's precise hitting they came away with the 15-9, 15-13 victory.

Unfortunately in B-league, controversy at the end overshadowed the games that were actually played.

As expected, #1 ranked Trojan Busters advanced to the finals by defeating both the Middy's and Floorplay in straight games. However, on the other side of the bracket, Free Balls, who upset third ranked P-Tag 13-15, 15-8, 15-3, were destined to meet #2 ranked Cool Zero to decide who would play in the final. Cool Zero easily won this match 15-3, 15-8. However Cool Zero was forced to default for using an ineligible player. Meantime Free Balls, thinking that they had lost, had some of their players leave and therefore did not have enough to play in the finals. Trojan Busters automatically became champions. It should be pointed out, however, that the Trojan Busters were the top ranked team all year long, and almost certainly would have taken the title match against either a legal Cool Zero team or Freeballs.

Tennis Playoffs Underway

The first round of the playoffs are over and by the time you read this the second will be done as well. In the men's A-league, The Skunkers barely got by a hot French/Freese, 15-12. In the other A -league match, Mer and Ger advanced to the next round with a walk over as Carri/Pippin failed to show. The semi-finals has the number one ranked Jamican Bobsled taking on a scrappy Mer and Ger and number two, Tosiney, taking on the Skunkers, the only team to mar their record so far!

The men's B-league playoffs are also well underway. This week, the number one and two teams take to the court in their quest for the shirts. Last week, Stroke My Handle easily beat Say What and now will face top ranked Ehrman/Girolami. In one of the closer matches of the day, the Crazy Guys came ready to play, but fell just short as they lost 12-9 to a tough Smashing Gametes. Well if good old George does not do well on Tuesday at least his supporters did as Push For Bush advanced to play #2 ranked Help. Wasn't that Dukakis' final campaign slogan?

In the Co-rec A-league, the favored Taking Bets easily moved past Mabry/Babida, giving up only one game. Taking Bets will go on to meet Here For The Sun who squeaked by Shred 13-10. In the bottom half of the bracket, Brent and Margo easily defeated Kirsten/Bill and will go onto meet the Fatsos. The Fatsos moved on by beating A Girl And Her Toy, 18-6, despite the Ray Charles costume. In the final match, #2 ranked Him and Her will play Frick and Frack. Both teams advanced with easy matches. Frick and Frack received a walk over when the other team failed to show and Him and Her defeated the Dead Souls 18-4.

The Co-rec B-league teams could not shake off their old ways as four teams failed to show for the first round play. Bad Attitude had it all together when they faced Basso/Attisha allowing only but one game to their opponents. Keenan/Prakelt also advanced with a 16-8 victory over Pebbles and Bam Bam. In another close match, Johnston/Forster got past the Treaters although it did go down to the final set. Finally, #2 ranked Ehrman/Merril received another bye as neither of their potential opponents showed up for their match. Are Ehrman/Merril using scare tactics??? Or are they that good?

3x3 Basketball Season Begins

It was the first week of action in the 3x3 Basketball league and there were some great games to report.

In the first A league game of the day the DiMuro brothers teamed up to lead their team to an easy 15-6, 15-6 victory over Spread, Penetrate and Shoot.

In other A-league match-ups, Anthony Eros' Chill's Gay recovered from a one game deficit to over come Tony Richard's Sigma Chi 12-15, 15-13, 15-9. Chill's Gay then turned around and defeated Jim Spina's Season on the Brink 15-5, 15-12. Jed Rucker had a very impressive performance for Chill's

Gay. The A-league game of the week had Dream Team III up against Up-N-Comin'. Danny Lavis led Up-N-Comin' to a one game advantage, but his team then fell to Eric Diamond's Dream Team III 15-1. The deciding game went back and forth and was finally won 15-13 by Up-N-Comin'.

Moving to B-league: Seb's Boys posted a 2-0 record by defeating Reyes and Deep in the Hole. Also posting a 2-0 record is Vance Johnston's team who defeated Straight Shots and Trojan Busters in three. Tune in next week for women's action.

Chi's Win Two in Co-Rec Softball

The cream began to rise to the top this weekend as the softball playoffs began. Sigma Chi dominated the co-rec division with impressive wins over Nympho Barbs and Just a Bunch of Czars. In the 14-4 trouncing of Nympho Barbs, Dan O'Connell and Al Stamatikis scored three runs each for Sigma Chi. In the battle with the Czars, Ron Wood led the offense with a single, a triple, and a home run. The Czars put up a heroic fight throughout the game, but a four-run fourth inning clinched the 8-3 victory for Sigma Chi. Don Cochran and Kevin Carlin combined for one hit for the Czars while Tori McFarland had three singles all by herself for Sigma Chi.

In one of the tighter games of the weekend, Rec-ing Crew nipped a surprisingly tough Beef and Buns 4-2. After a 2-2 tie in regulation, Rec-ing Crew used some smart place hitting in the eighth to push two runs across and claim the victory. Chris Argubright and Emelie Tirre led the way for continued on pg. 16

Short But Sweet

Winning championships is nice, but one doesn't have to take the title to be a winner in the world of IM sports. Short But Sweet was written off early by the volleyball experts, but Meg Estey's team paid no attention and advanced to the finals anyway. In a championship match too good for anyone to lose, Short But Sweet fell 15-9, 15-13 to Dive and Dig. It seems fitting that both these teams are rewarded. So while Dive and Dig gets the champ shirts, Short But Sweet gets the shirts for Budweiser IM Team of the Week.

INTRAMURAL HIGHLIGHTS

AIA Wins the Big One

It took 3 years, but Alcoholics In Action finally won the Water Polo Championship. It was a clash of titans as AIA took on 4 Guys and 3 Girls, a team who already had two championship shirts to their credit. After 30 minutes of hard fought action, AIA was victorious, 14-11.

Early on, the game appeared to be a rout. However, AIA was not the routers, rather the routees as 4 Guys and 3 Girls took an early lead and kept it up until half time taking a 7-2 lead. Ann Caro had 6 points to pace her team in the first half. 4 Guys and 3 Girls had a great defense in Peter Greeley and Darcy Marlow and this helped thwart AIA's attack and provide spark for the offense. It appeared once again that AIA would be the bridesmaid.

The second half saw a complete change. Two goals by Emelie Tirre brought AIA to within one and the momentum had obviously shifted. Soon, AIA was up by 4 points, 12-8, as Bo Landress and Laura Czekanski got into the scoring column. Matt Kelley tried to make it close by pouring in three quick goals for 4 Guys and 3 Girls, but it wasn't enough as the defense of AIA anchored by goalie Wade Walker, tightened up. Tom Gorman and Jennifer Jacobs played outstanding defense keeping 4 Guys and 3 Girls out of the goal at the end of the game.

Rec-ing Crew with three and two hits respectively. Al Zawistoski had two singles and two key RBI's for Beef and Buns.

In another tight contest, Liquor Hogans beat AKPsi Pleasure Machine 5-3. After a 2-2 tie in the first, Liquor Hogans broke away in the third and added an insurance run in the fourth. Wade Walker and Dan Geiger led the Hogans with two hits each. Kelly Collins and Kelly Mullins paced AKPsi

Can You Make The Call?

The Scramble Golf tournament is coming up tomorrow, so the time is right to review an important rule. Hypothetically, let's say the team of Dan Miller and John Nothdurft are putting for birdie. Northdurft leaves his putt short and then taps in for a par before Miller has a chance to putt. Does Miller still get his shot or is the par recorded?

The IM department would like to thank the officials who worked the just concluded volleyball playoffs. Special thanks to Byl Berger and Kelly Lawrence for an excellent job in the championship game.

Answer: Score the par. Although both players have a legal right to play each shot, once the ball is in the cup the hole is over.

Square Pan Im Players of the Week

Dan O'Connell and Anne Sperrazzo are this week's Square Pan IM Players of the Week. O'Connell did his work on the softball field as his Sigma Chi teams went 2-1. In two co-rec victories, O'Connell's 5 for 10 performance was instrumental in leading Sigma Chi into the semifinals. In the mens league, a 4 for 4 outings was not enough to provide a victory, but was impressive nevertheless.

In volleyball, the key position is setter. Every IM champion has had a top setter and this year was no exception. Anne Sperrazzo was clearly the league's best and that is why Dive and Dig won the championship. You would not have read about Ken Patrick's great leaping ability were it not for Sperrazzo's ability to get him the ball.
